With my camera tucked into my pocket and my binoculars slung over my shoulder I was ready for an afternoon hike.

The mountains which only yesterday were hidden by twirling snow flakes, resembling silent ghosts, were clear again. There was a thin warmth across the valley. Sunshine crept up the ridges and a single shaft of a breeze came down the slopes.

Along the way little streams slid with shifting, broken patterns down the hill sides. These slender trickles widened into pleasant shallow pools.

Still clinging to the ledges, porous but holding on, were the dripping, glistening spikes of ice. I imagined that I could hear the muffled sounds of roots expanding with their power; for the landscape at this time is a constant and vast system of action. The natural world with its work gives mental stimulation and a feeling of freedom.

A motion caught my eye. I waited. Around a tree appeared the head of a big gray squirrel. He watched my every move. Then up the tree, eyes bright, and bannertail waving he scampered.

Still watching, a woodcock came spiraling up from a bit of bare, wet ground at my feet. This robin-sized chunk of warm-brown startled me, jumping so near then whistling away to the side hill. I saw him again light in this part of the world exposed to the jumble of rocks. In the background was one; huge, weathered, gray and patched with lichens. I thought maybe he'd fly again but he didn't. He must have liked his new found, faint bloom of green in the moist darkness by the singing brook. The place did possess a romantic beauty; forest and hill, a secluded spot hemmed in by evergreens, primal silence, a bit of sunshine, lacy shadows, calm fragrance, and a thousand things to see.

I turned my footsteps homeward and looked to old Overset mountain trying to picture the spot at its far end where Ruth and I recently found ourselves after a hike through the woods from the Ice Caves Road. This was a new approach for us for we usually go in from here.

A stream gurgled a happy song as it entered the pond. It knows where the trout lie, watches the peep and her fawn, sees the squirrel leap from tree to tree while above it stands Overset Bluff ageless and vast, in an immensity of time. High up icy fingers pointed to the white clad pond below.

We wished we were at its top looking across the valley. Some day I recalled it all again and could see it as when we left; its rugged profile sharply etched against the sky. We had discovered in this simple and lonely place; what the world is searching for a perfect peace of mind.

COUNCIL COMMENTS

Telstar Student Council member Randy Littlefield, was elected second vice president of the regional student councils at the regional convention. Congrats, Randy.

Course selection sheets have appeared this week. Now, all students except seniors worry about enough credits, who's teaching what, and electives. I guess it is spring after all!

Notice—the Spring concert date has been set for May 3. There will be further information on the concert next week.

In observance of National Library week, which falls during the week of vacation, the Library Club has purchased two books to be given away on Friday of this week. "The Secret Woman" by Victoria Holt will be given to a senior high student, and "Mindy" by Louise Dickenson Rich, will be awarded to a junior high student. Any student wishing to have his name entered in the drawing should leave his name at the Library desk before Friday noon, when the drawing will be held.

Merry Robertson

Merry Robertson, pictured here, has been awarded the Good Citizenship Award by the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her qualities of citizenship, patriotism, dependability and service, made her a candidate for this award. My congratulations, Merry.

On Tuesday of this week at about 4:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time a few lucky Telstar students and two teachers boarded a plane for Spain. Let's hope they don't bring back too many bad stories!

Do you have a craving for elderberry wine? You'll be glad to hear that restaurants are going well for America and Old Europe.

Personally, I'm looking forward to April vacation very much! Do be everyone here at good ol' TELSTAR. We'll be reporting the week after next, on what next time—TOMORROW! Roberta Crockett

Two top roses of 1972, Apollo and Portrait, share first place spotlight as All-America Award winners

APOLLO (Patent Applied For). This 1972 award winner is the most productive yellow hybrid tea rose now available.

This year's All-America honors go in a clean sweep to hybrid tea roses. Both award winners, Apollo and Portrait belong to this most popular class and both should take their places in the gardens of the nations as outstanding members.

Both went through the grind of two years of testing in the 22 test gardens of All-America Rose Selections scattered about the United States, and emerged as the only award winners.

This spring they will be available throughout the country, both as bare root and potted or canned plants, and should be appearing in rose show competition by this fall.

Wilton's major industries-Canning and Cloth

by Dorothy Beedy
In the late 1830's, Dimon built a yarn mill on the now occupied by Samp-son's Super Market in Wilton.
The mill was moved to past office lot adjacent to Wilton Hardware Company Store, and the business carried on by Mr. Fumel his son, John. One report ed that their Wilton Brand Mill replaced Col.
Firman's carding mill which processed wool into for household spinning weaving.

Shortly after the Civil War,
the first big textile mill built on the original site of yarn mill and was operated by Mr. Fumel until death. It was later sold to Walker family.

In 1891 Mr. F. J. Goodspeed purchased the mill and operated the mill as a textile manufacturing
at a Wilton-only product, Cashmerette, or thick cloth, kept the mill in operation until it was closed.
Through the generosity of George Goodspeed, the mill was converted into a Community Building, containing a theater, gymnasium,
and a scout hall.

In 1902 F. J. Goodspeed leased the Dryden plant on the site of a former canning factory. He and his two sons, Frank O. and George F., formed a corporation known as the Wilton Woolen Company. Greater additions were made to the building in 1903, 1909, 1916, with the last major addition in 1928.

After the death of Mr.
Goodspeed, Sr., George Goodspeed purchased his brother's share and became sole owner. From a small mill employing a few people, the Wilton Woolen Company grew to be the largest individually owned woolen mill in New England. Until the 1920's, Cashmerette was the principal product, but the introduction of rubber overshoes forced discontinuation of this fabric. In 1927 the production of automobile fabrics and yard goods for ladies' wear was begun. The first automobile cloth was made for the Ford Motor Company to be used in Model
A Ford Cars.

During World War II, the facilities of the mill were placed at the disposal of the United States Government for the manufacture of cloth for the army and the navy. About ten million yards were reported to have been made for this purpose. In 1942 Wilton Woolen Company was awarded the Navy-Army "E" Flag for the excellent work done in processing cloth for the Armed Services.

A group of local men purchased the plant from the late George Goodspeed's estate on January 1, 1943 and operated under the same policies and manufactured the same type of prewar products until plastic replaced the use of automobile cloth. The company closed its doors in 1953 and the machinery was moved out in 1959.

In the 1660's B. F. Sturtevant, inventor of machines to make wooden pegs for shoes, built a factory on Canal Street at the foot of the lake.
Because the town refused mill tax exemption he moved the machinery to New Hampshire, where he continued the manufacture of his product.

Wilton's canning industry was started by C. G. Sawyer at his home about 1873. He canned corn on a small scale, but as business increased he moved it to the peg mill where he also sold groceries.
Outgrowing those quarters he moved to the site of the old starch factory. This was the beginning of the Sawyer Grocery Business, later operated by his son, W. E.
Sawyer, and still later by his grandsons. Since that time three other canning factories have packed well-known brands of fruits and vegetables. They were the Marble Factory at Dryden,

now out of business, the Noyes
Shop, located on the Wilton
East Wilton road now Backus
Garage, and the W. S. Wells and Son Shop on High Street, still in operation.

The following was taken from an interview with Mr.
Vance Wells, Sr.

Mr. Walter Wells began his career in the canning business at North Anson in 1896. He carried on the business there for several years, then moved to Wilton in 1911.

In 1923 he began custom canning of apples, sweet corn, and beans. Mr. Wells was joined by his son, Vance, in 1923. The factory has since operated under the name of W.
S. Wells and Son. Vance Wells', son, Adrian, is now in business with his father.

The Story of the Bell on Stow Church

by Gwen Tarbell

A letter this week from David Crouse gave some information on the bell in the Stow Church.

In May of 1957 Mrs. Vera Babbage, a former Stow
resident, then residing in West Falmouth stopped to visit the church and inquired of Duane Watson and David Crouse, who were working on the lawn at the time, if the church had a bell and learned it didn't.

In June Frances Emerson
had a letter from Mrs. Babbage saying the West
Falmouth Fire Department was planning to scrap their alarm bell and would the church like it. The church wanted it and in July Edward Mills of Fryeburg donated transportation to bring the bell from West Falmouth to Stow. The next day July 24,

1957 Guy Emerson and David Crouse carried the bell 60 feet up the belfry stairway and installed it in the belfry.

The bell is relatively small, 24" in diameter, but does have exceptional tonal qualities.
Before being used as the fire alarm bell in West Falmouth
it had been the school bell there.

Versatile Space Blanket New Aid to Outdoorsman

One of the most difficult decisions the outdoorsman has to make before setting out to enjoy his favorite pastime is what gear he needs to be adequately equipped without being over-burdened.

Now comes the Space? sportsman's blanket, made from superinsulation material for all-season use.

The same material is used on NASA space flights to protect astronauts and sensitive instruments against extreme temperatures.

It's from Thermos, world famous for vacuum bottles and a wide range of outdoor and camping gear.

Hunter-campers use the sportsman's blanket as a spare blanket, poncho, wind-breaker, ground cloth or duck blind, and its grommets and rustproof corners enable it to be hung up or tied down. Completely waterproof, the blanket has also found great favor among skiers, who stick one in a parka pocket for wind-buffed chair lifts. Snow-mobilers welcome it as a weather cover too.

Come spring, the blanket does not get stored with your skis either. Use it as a cockpit sunshade or rain cover for your boat, a picnic cloth or a beach blanket. Just as its insulating properties keep you warm, they can keep you cool as well.

The 50" x 84" blanket weighs 12 ounces and folds compactly into a convenient carrying pouch. Its versatility makes it indispensable indeed for every outdoorsman.

Wilton's Industries

The well-known brand name, "Belle of Maine", has appeared on the shelves of many leading grocery stores on foods as dandelions, beans, sweet corn, and apples. Today dandelion and fiddlehead greens are the only products packed by this company.

In the spring of 1929, Mr. Wells began canning dandelion greens. Dandelions are processed in cans only and Mr. Wells states that as far as he knows his factory is the only one in the United States to can dandelions and one of the few to pack fiddleheads. They raise their own dandelions for processing. They have two acres of cultivated dandelions which are harvested by machine five times each year, which is enough to maintain the present production.

As an experiment Mr. Wells canned fiddlehead greens for a friend from Somerset County in 1967, but for one year only. Fiddleheads for processing are obtained from the Winooski Valley, near Waterbury, Vermont. The season lasts about two weeks and the fiddleheads are delivered to the canning shop at the rate of three-fourths ton to two tons every three or four days.

In 1970 the company packed one thousand cases. The next spring saw an increase in production as twelve hundred cases were marketed and nearly three tons of fresh fiddleheads were processed and sold as fresh produce.

During World War II Wells Shop was one of thirteen in the New England states to receive the Department of Agriculture's "E" award for increased wartime production.

STUDENTS

When teachers at Park City high school students to evaluate teaching methods last year got some surprises.

In one math class, students demanded that they be allowed to use calculators, not less, but they felt they were learning fast enough.

Other students wanted more often tests could gauge their progress, but didn't like results "held" in grading; they felt tests should be used as a tool of learning.

Asking students for a new educational approach, managers and students are to encourage support of the school in producing the student in the most efficient way.

The teachers, all from Monroe School, had just returned from a weekend seminar on island sponsored by the department.

One of our people, a professional, participated, expecting the conference to be the most interesting.

STUDENTS TEACH THE TEACHERS

When teachers at a New York City high school asked students to evaluate current teaching methods last spring, they got some surprising answers.

In one math class, students demanded that they be given more, not less, homework. They felt they weren't learning fast enough.

Other students wanted to be tested more often so that they could gauge their own progress, but didn't want the test results "held against" them in grading; they thought test results should be used simply as a tool of learning. Asking students for ideas is part of a new educational concept that regards teachers as managers and students as employees. As managers, teachers are to enlist the active support of their students in producing the product the students' own education — in the most efficient way.

The teachers, all from the Monroe School in the Bronx, had just returned from a weekend seminar on Long Island sponsored by our training department.

One of our people, Jim A. P. O. B. A. N. C. O., who anticipated, explained: before the conference, the teachers had considered the principal to be the manager, the teacher as an employee, the student as a product. They got into a new concept — the teacher as a manager with 30 people under him — people he must motivate and whom he must make the most interesting.

We borrowed the idea of bringing the teachers together for a weekend of professional discussions in the business world. There, the teachers tested themselves in a series of informal lectures on "systems analysis" (systematic methods of breaking problems) and the ways to apply it in the classroom. The sessions ran on Friday night and Saturday through to noon, Sunday.

Norman Willard, who set up our training facilities, said: "We hoped to show a new way of thinking. We can show the teachers a new way of handling things. We can 'blow their minds' a little. The idea is to give teachers exposure to these skills for solving problems in teaching and decision making. We can help bring change in schools."

At the business conference, perhaps the "revolutionary" was the function of the test. It was to test the teacher, not the pupil. Teachers when someone teaches something to them and the employees when it is the teacher who is being taught, not the Virtually all the teachers who attended decided to revamp their lesson plans and restructure their courses along lines discussed at the seminar. They are also submitting many changes to the principal, Max Ostrover, who is an enthusiastic booster of the seminar.

The big lesson learned from a joint venture like this is the need for cooperation. In a school environment, there are a number of elements — students, teachers, parents, community leaders and business. If there is to be progress, each one of these elements has to be in place, collaborating with the others. When that takes place, the community may anticipate some giant steps forward.

State parks scheduled to open on time for vacationers' use

AUGUSTA — When the system of Maine state parks opens this spring, there will be a new addition to the growing family.

The new — and unique — park is Holbrook Island Sanctuary, located on Penobscot Bay in Brooksville. Scheduled to open May 30, the 1,230-acre tract of land will be operated as a wildlife appreciation and preservation area. The property, which has for many years been a wildlife sanctuary under private management, was a gift from Miss Anita Harris of Holbrook Island, located in the waters just off Brookville.

In addition to this welcome new addition, the Department of Parks and Recreation has many other fine day-use parks. And it looks as though they will open as scheduled.

Popham Beach and Phippsburg and Reid State Park in Georgetown are slated to open April 15, as is Two Lights State Park in Cape Elizabeth. The remaining day-use parks, all to open May 30, include Crescent Beach in Cape Elizabeth, Damariscotta Lake in Jefferson, Grafton Notch in Grafton, Moose Point in Searsport, Peacock Beach in Richmond, Peaks-Kenny in Dover-Foxcroft and Quoddy Head in Lubec. Wolf Neck State Park in Freeport will be under construction during the summer season, and will be ready for use in 1973.

Season Passes

For the traveler who wishes to visit many of the parks in the Maine system, or for a user who plans frequent returns to one or two regional parks, a season pass is the answer. Parks and Memorials Superintendent Thomas Dickens says the best way to obtain a season pass, which sells for $10, is to ask at the first park you visit, rather than writing to the Augusta office.

For an up-to-date schedule of fees for the many camping and day-use parks in Maine, or for additional information about any parks in the system, write to the Maine Department of Parks and Recreation, State Office Building, Augusta, Maine, 04330.

You and your pet

By TED KAVANAUGH DIRECTOR, ALPO PET NEWS BUREAU

How to Keep Your Dog Healthy and Happy

Your dog gives you his love and trust completely. Showing him that you return his love is the best way to keep him happy.

Keeping him healthy is a responsibility not an emotion. See to his particular health needs just like any other member of the family. For example, his booster shots and annual physicals.

It is often said that distemper occurs only in the young dog. But veterinarians tell us this just isn't true. Distemper can occur at any age, although the young dog is most susceptible. Serious? Very! But only if you neglect arranging for his yearly boosters. So, don't neglect them.

To simplify matters, have his annual physical made at the same time as the yearly boosters. The ears, teeth, eyes, heart and general body condition can be checked. Catching early warning signs here and having them promptly attended to is the wise and loving rule to follow.

Is Your Dog One of Those Flop-Eared Beauties?

If so, you should be aware that the normal circulation of air through his ear canals is somewhat impaired. This means you should check them occasionally, as you would your child's ears, to keep them clean and dry. Otherwise, the accumulation of dirt and moisture tends to get warm, becoming a potent source of infection.

If your dog has already started shaking his head and scratching his ears, have him examined and treated by your veterinarian. This probably won't happen again if you remember to keep his ears clean.

Worming: A Matter of Common Sense

It will be news to many new puppy owners that a dog's wormings do not end with puppyhood.

Various worms are found wherever dogs are. Their life cycles vary and although the adult worms may be destroyed by worming, the eggs produce adults a few weeks later. Worming is a process, don't worm a dog without a veterinarian's advice.

A puppy should be wormed every 6-8 weeks. Once matured, have him checked at his annual physical.

Remember, your pet's best friend is his veterinarian!

winter I spent three or four weeks on snowshoes with them, visiting a couple of lumber camps. . .

It was a matter of pride with me to keep up with my stalwart associates, and to shift for myself. . . I was rather tired by some of the all-day tramps, especially in the deep snow, when my webbed racquets gave me 'snowshoe feet', or when we waded up the Munsungin in shallow water, dragging a dugout, until my ankles became raw from slipping on the smooth underwater stones. . . I still remember with qualified joy the ascent and especially the descent of Katahdin in moccasins, because, to the deep disapproval of my companions, I had lost one of my heavy shoes in crossing a river at a riffle.

I also remember such delicious nights, under a lean-to, by stream or lake, in the clear fall weather, or in winter on balsam boughs in front of a blazing stump, when we had beaten down and shovelled away the deep snow, and kept our foot-gear away from the fire, so that it should not thaw and freeze; — and the meals of venison, trout or partridge; and one meal consisting of muskrat and a fish-duck, which, being exceedingly hungry, we heartily appreciated.

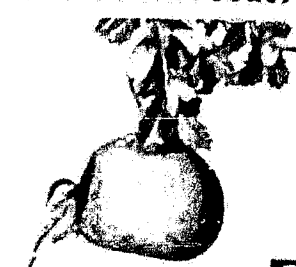

But the bodily benefit was not the largest part of the good done me. I was accepted as part of the household; and the family and friends represented in their lives the kind of Americanism — self-respecting, duty-performing, life-enjoying — which is the most valuable possession that any generation can hand on to the next. . .

Once, while driving in a wagon with Dave, up an exceedingly wet and rocky backwoods road, with the water pouring down the middle, I asked him how in Aroostook County they were able to tell its roads from its rivers. 'No beaver dams in the roads,' instantly responded Dave. . .

Gourd Bird Feeder

This chickadee clasps the gourd feeder with its claws — does not need a perch.

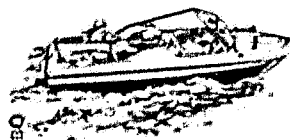

The size of the hole in this gourd tells you immediately that this is a feeder filled with seeds and not a bird house.

There also is no perch so it is intended only for small birds that cling with their claws.

It's so easy to make a similar one. Plant a packet of seeds of mixed gourds and, in autumn, cut the hole with a sharp penknife, shake out seeds, dry and hang the gourd. That's all!

At one of the logging camps I became good friends with a quiet, resolute-looking man, named Brown, one of the choppers; and afterwards I stopped at his house and was as much struck with his good and pretty wife as I had been with him. He had served in the Civil War and had been wounded. His creed was that peace was a great blessing, but that even so great a blessing could be purchased at too dear a price. I did not see him again until thirty-seven years later when he came to a meeting at which I spoke in Portland. He had shaved off his beard and was an old man and I did not at first recognize him; but after the first sentence, I knew him and very glad indeed I was to see him once more.

When I was President, the Searalls and the Prides came down to Washington to visit us. We talked over everything, public and private, past and present, the education and future careers of our children; the proper attitude of the United States in external and internal matters. We all of us looked at the really important matters of public policy and private conduct from substantially the same viewpoint. Never were there more welcome guests at the White House."

Sagamore Hill, March 20, 1918

Maine DAR history, activities

Part II

The DAR all over the country is working with youth, to perpetuate the ideals and principles upon which this country was founded. The Children of the American Revolution Society was formed in 1895 and provides training in patriotism and leadership. The first society in Maine was organized in 1938, though a few groups had met earlier. There are now five societies in Maine. Several New England C.A.R. Regional Conferences have been held in Maine. The work of the C.A.R. is much like that of the DAR. The children give programs for the DAR and the DARs sponsor their work. They maintain the Tomb of the Unknown Revolutionary Soldier in Alexandria, Virginia.

Indians

Maine Daughters have an Indian Fund which provides scholarships for Indian students. There are also two Indian schools, Bacone College near Muskogee, Oklahoma, and St. Mary's School for Indian Girls in Springfield, South Dakota, which receive assistance from the DAR. Maine Daughters also give toward the support of the two DAR owned schools, Kate Duncan Smith School in Grant, Alabama, and Tamasee in South Carolina. Clothing is sent to the schools for their sales from which they obtain money and furnish clothes for the people at a very small cost. Beads and craft materials are sent to the Indian schools, Hillside School for Boys in Marlboro, Mass., and Opportunity Farm in New Gloucester, Maine, are nearby schools which get support from Maine Daughters.

Scholarships

Two years ago $50 was given by the Maine DAR to the State winner of the American History Scholarship contest. The State Organization gives scholarship loans to worthy students. The National Society has scholarships for Nursing, Occupational Therapy and Medical Training, as well as for pupils in the Approved Schools. Ninety-six Good Citizen Girls, in public and private High Schools, are sponsored by the thirty Maine chapters. They are chosen by the faculty and by their fellow Seniors for Dependability, Service, Leadership and Patriotism. The three highest in Maine receive a $100 bond, $25 and $10 respectively. The National winner receives a

Cold Facts About The Common Cold

$1000 scholarship and a silver Revere bowl. The sponsoring chapters give each girl a pin and a certificate and entertain them with their mothers. Some chapters give History and Good Citizenship medals to boys as well as girls.

J.A.C. Clubs

The Junior American Citizen Clubs teach children of all races and creeds from kindergarten through High School the principles of good citizenship, its privileges and responsibilities, loyalty to the U. S., respect for its Flag and the history of our great country and of its government. At one time fifty or more clubs were sponsored by DAR in Maine. During February, which is observed nationwide as American History Month, many of the chapters sponsor essay contests for sixth, seventh and eighth grades with the subject chosen by the National Society. R.O.T.C. medals are given at the U. of M., Orono, and the Maine Maritime Academy for outstanding ability and achievement.

When an ancient Roman sneezed, his friends would say, "Deus te sacret!" If you are rusty, that translates the modern "God bless you." Apparently, the time-honored ritual was as ineffective as it is now in terms of warding off the common cold. Man emperors, monarchs, and empires for curative herbs thousands of years later. Scientists are still looking for that elusive cure.

The full impact of the common cold on American life and society can't be calculated, but various estimates have provided these interesting guesstimates:

- Colds account for 10 per cent of all industrial absenteeism; every worker nearly four days a year. Cost of this loss could be as high as $1 billion annually.

- Each American child home with the sniffles six days a year. This means 50 million days from school.

If your family is as you can count — based on experience — on dealing with four or five colds a year, to do about it?

As preventive measures, general rules are in effect:

1. Stay away from people who have a cold.
2. Eat a well-balanced diet with plenty of liquids.
3. Get plenty of exercise.
4. Avoid rooms that are drafty or stuffy.
5. In inclement weather, bundle up well.

And if you do catch a cold, as you probably will, are there things you can do to make the annoying symptoms bearable?

Aspirin, of course, has been a stand-by for cold symptoms due to congestion. It's available in many forms — alone and in combination with buffering agents — other drugs.

When you catch a cold, bed is recommended for the first few days. This gives your body a chance to build up its defenses and lessen the chances of passing the infection to others.

Take courage. If you have an average cold, it will usually be over in five to seven days. It's a cold that hangs on for a long time.

Immediate medical attention should be sought if the symptoms are severe. They include chills and fever, a sharp increase in temperature, difficulty breathing, chest or side pain.

A good rule of thumb is to treat the common cold with respect. You can't catch a cold by exercising, but you can catch one by exercising too hard and common sense.

Convention by Maine native offers challenge to clothespin industry

Modern Clothespin

succeeded in doing just that.

The Maine native, who now resides in South Merrimack, N. H., has invented an item called Solardiscs, a patented clothespin item of circular design. The inventor believes that his creation is practically indestructible and it may be attached from any direction since there is no top or bottom position. He states, "No squeezing or positioning is required, making them particularly appreciated by the elderly, handicapped, or arthritic."

Ironically, the state of Maine currently supplies about 70 percent of the 200 million dozen clothespins produced in the United States annually. The inventor of the product that could revolutionize the industry is the son of Mrs. Margaret Duarte of Lewiston. He is a graduate of Lewiston High School and is married to the former Marla Webster of Lewiston.

The young inventor holds down a full time job as Associate Electronics Engineer at Sanders Associates in Nashua, N. H. He is scheduled to appear on the pre-taped TV program, "What's My Line?" on April 26 over WGAN, Portland, and will stump the panel with his unusual invention.

Buy Selectively

Today's woman is more sophisticated than in days gone by, and when it comes to buying products that pertain to her family, she is far more selective. She has more stores to shop in, unit pricing and competitive advertising trying to entice her. Reading labels at the supermarket has become the rule instead of the exception. Years ago, she might have been ashamed to buy the less costly brands but today, it's smart to buy right!

Washday products, particularly modern phosphate-free detergents, are an outstanding example of this evolution of shopping habits. For a long time, women were chained to the brands promoted on the "Soap Operas." They felt that a certain risk was involved of which the cost of the detergent was only a small part. The entire wash load could be ruined, she felt, and more seriously the health of the family was at stake.

Recently, however, the home maker has recognized that the store brands and the lesser known brands not only do the job as well as the better advertised brands, but for many fabrics, they do the job better.
And through experience she found that her finest items were completely safe.

Thus, through test and trial,
these products have earned the confidence of the housewife. Instead of the phosphates which are charged with polluting the nation's waters, these products use that well recognized laundry substance, washing soda. In addition, they supply the brighteners, the bleach and the borax. You get loads of deep, rich, active suds to make your laundry chore a one step operation. Follow the garment manufacturer's directions and you'll be pleased with the results.

Be a smart shopper and check out the phosphate-free detergents!

Good Boating Starts With Tip-Top Engine

To a boat owner who has planned an afternoon of water skiing or a fishing trip, there can be nothing more frustrating than a balky outboard engine. Most outboard owners keep their engines in top tune by following the maintenance recommendations clearly specified in the owner's manual. However, the few owners who do experience engine trouble can usually blame no one but themselves.

According to marina operators and service technicians most outboard trouble can be traced to owner neglect. To insure trouble-free boating, here's a checklist prepared by specialists at Champion Spark Plug Company.

- Periodically check spark plugs. If they are dirty or worn, clean and regap them. If they are worn, replace them. It's also a good idea to have an extra set of plugs on hand for emergencies. And don't forget a plug wrench.

- Breaker points should be checked at the same time the plugs are checked. Make sure they are in good condition and the gap is adjusted to specifications.

- Ignition wiring that is cracked or broken is a source of trouble. Check wiring for these conditions and also make all connections are tight.

- Proper spark timing must be checked. Check the engine's run efficiently. Check against the recommendations in the owner's manual.

- The fuel system is another critical area. Make all components are clean and in good working order. Replace filters before they become clogged. And regularly measure the gas mixture whenever filling the tank. Too little oil can cause overheating, detonation, accelerated wear, and much oil can result in fouling, loss of power and starting.

- Check the gear oil. Proper lubrication level.

If you are the owner of a brand new outboard motor, be sure that the break-in period is important. Run the engine at about half throttle for the first hour. For the first hour, open the throttle fully, hold it there for one or so, then throttle to half.

By keeping an eye on the engine, you can eliminate a lot of needless trouble. But no matter how thorough an owner may be, maintenance, he may experience hard starting due to overheating. The cause of this malady is that the engine is overheating or fouling.

Extra fuel may be carburetor, so it is a good idea to disconnect the line whenever the engine is not in use. Overheating also results when the tank is exposed to the sun which causes the fuel to expand up enough pressure in the tank to override the needle.

By following these instructions you'll not only get quick starts and smooth running this season, but many seasons to come.

If you are the owner of a brand new outboard motor, it is important to run the engine at about half throttle for the first hour. For the first 10 minutes during this time, hold the throttle open full, hold it there for 10 seconds or so, then throttle back to half.

But no matter how good a maintenance man you are, once hard starting occurs, the cause of this may be the engine is fouled, the carburetor, or the fuel line. Whenever the engine is not in use, overboard tank is exposed to the sun which can cause the fuel to evaporate enough to cause the tank to overheat.

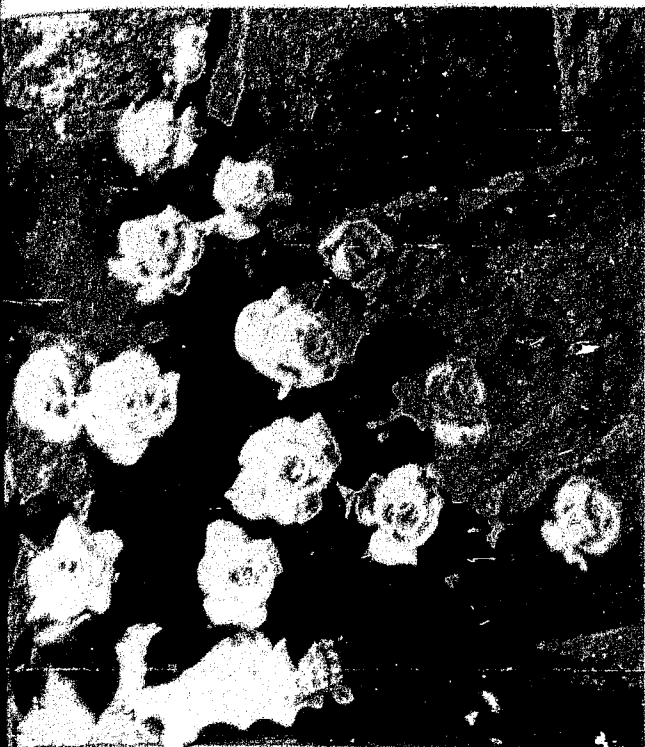

By following these tips, you'll not only get quick starts and smooth running this season, but many seasons to come.

With 'em or agin 'em. The furor set off by the National Collegiate Athletic Association's decision to permit first-year college students to play varsity basketball and football isn't likely to die down before summer. If you're a freshman, in what many think the hardest year of college, what do you think — are you with 'em? Kids do care! Next time your parents say: "kids don't care about anything but rock, 'n' birds, 'n' motorcycles" you might point up that they're only half right! Cause kids do care, about the first three, and about people too!

For openers, take that legendary benefit concert for Pakistan relief—"The Concert for Bangala-Desh" held at Madison Square Garden on August 1st last year. It was there that Ringo Starr, Bob Dylan and George Harrison donated their talents and all the proceeds to the refugees of Bangala-Desh. If you bought a ticket or buy the recording, YOU CARE!

But, if you care, don't look too hopefully towards the Peace Corps, for Congress it seems is saying — WHO CARES, and has voted barely enough funds to keep the noble idea afloat. Write your Congressman and tell him you care! Maybe there's something going on in your community to show YOU CARE.

Question: If you had the opportunity to take off a year between high school graduation and college, would you do it? According to recent articles, many young people are doing just that. They say it aids maturity and gives them a better feeling for college after a break from formal schooling. Think about it and discuss it with your parents and school counselors.

What's new? Catch up that great show "Pillars of the Roof" or "Cisco Pike". That's right, Kris Kristofferson has hit the movie flick — some say it's a flop, some say it's bad. You judge.

The Cincinnati Reds just signed 15-year-old Ruel Rosario as pitcher. He's not out of high school yet, but he's a Dominican and subject to the rule which prohibits major league teams signing players before they graduate from high school.

If you never got into hot pants, forget it, but this year the look is. Last year's look was man, but this year it's you guessed it — the look! I'd better stop it ahead...

But last, remember if you don't like it, the is and you're 18 — Vote!
